

Sherry Wittman

True or false:

a wolf spider chases his prey rather than building a web;

Galileo was an early fan of caviar;

poets who use complicated vernacular enjoy feelings of superiority;

seventy-one percent of the earth is covered by water;

shellfish poisoning can cause death from anaphylactic shock;

phyllosilicates exist in the accretionary rims around chondrules;

goldfish have a memory of three seconds;

a shiitake crop can be no better than its spawn;

Earl Grey was originally flavored with bergamot oil;

she loved her dog more than her husband;

a cricket in the house brings luck;

cholinergic agonists stimulate REM sleep;

white encompasses all colors of the spectrum;

the Greek word schizophrenia translates as “shattered mind”;

syntax changes everything;

Sanchita, Kriyamana, and Prarabdha are forms of karma;

bird nests are a Chinese delicacy that promote cell growth and tissue repair;

once I had a fish named Spartacus.